

Emotions and Clinical Communication in Antiquity

28 October 2020
Symposium Discussion
8:00—9:00am Melbourne (ADST)

29 October 2020
Special session in conjunction with the Biblical and Early Christian Studies Seminar
9:00—10:00am Melbourne (ADST)

30 October 2020
Symposium Discussion
8:00—9:00am Melbourne (ADST)

Participants include:

Han Baltussen (Adelaide)
Michael Champion (ACU)
Niki K. Clements (Rice)
Andrew T. Crislip (Virginia Commonwealth)
Ricardo Julião (Humboldt, Berlin)
Sophie Lunn-Rockliffe (Cambridge)
Susan B. Mattern (Georgia)
Bronwen Neil (Macquarie)
Georgia Petridou (Liverpool)
Caroline Petit (Warwick)
Chiara Thumiger (Kiel)
Jonathan Zecher (ACU)

Detail of British Library, Sloane MS
1975, f. 91v.

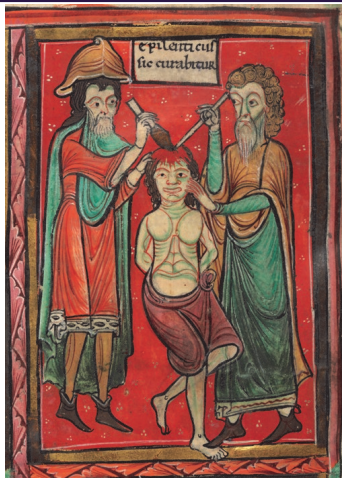

Whether healers were seeking to establish authority, find a shared language for communicating sufferings, or even pathologizing certain states, emotions played a crucial role in the give-and-take of ancient clinical communication.

This seminar aims to explore the role of emotions in shaping clinical experience and practice, and the work that clinical language did in shaping normative emotional regimes and communities.

REGISTER FOR ZOOM DETAILS AND FULL PROGRAMME

If you are interested in joining, please email Jonathan Zecher at jonathan.zecher@acu.edu.au.

ACU

INSTITUTE FOR RELIGION &
CRITICAL INQUIRY